NOT ALL BRUTALIZED BY WAR

English "Tommy" at the Front Are Said to Be Remarkable for Their Kindness.

You wouldn't think that men would go to war to learn how to be kind, but they do. There's no kinder creature in the whole wide world than the average Tommy. He makes a friend of any stray animal he can find. He shares his last franc with a chap who isn't his pal. He risks his life quite inconspicuously to rescue anyone who's wounded. When he's gone over the top with bomb and bayonet for the express purpose of "doing in" the Hun, he makes a comrade of the Fritz he captures. You'll see him coming down the battered trenches with some scared lad of a German at his side. He's gabbing away making throat noises and signs, smiling and doing his inarticulate best to be intelligible. He pats the Hun on the back, hands him chocolate and cigarettes, exchanges souvenirs and shares with him his last luxury. If anyone interferes with his Fritz he's willing to fight. When they come to the cage where the prisoner has to be handed over, the farewells of these companions whose acquaintance has been made at the bayonet point are often as absurd as they are affecting. I suppose one only learns the value of kindness when he feels the need of it himself. The men out there have said "good-by" to everything they loved, but they've got to love someone—so they give their affections to captured Fritzies, stray dogs, fellows who've collected a piece of a shell—in fact, to anyone who's a little worse off than themselves.—Coningsby, Lieutenant Canadian Field Artillery, in Good Housekeeping.

'T WAS AN INK WELL

Papa Bug—Don't you dare drink any of the dirty black water in that well, Tommy Bug.

WHY SHE WAS ANGRY.

The other night the Germans bombed a certain town in which there is a flourishing American canteen. The town is often bombed, and wherever that is the case the populace works up a very lively fear of the death from the sky. One never becomes accustomed to this sort of an attack.

"It was outrageous," said a pretty American canteen worker. She really is pretty and not merely pretty by journalistic brovet. She is in her early twenties, and lived a most sheltered and cultured life until she came here to keep American soldiers from getting into gastronomic difficulties.

"It certainly was," agreed the man, thinking of the bombing. "It is a cruel thing to bomb an undefended town."

"Rats!" said the canteen worker, viciously. "I'm not thinking of the Boche. I'm talking of our cook. She had to go and faint right in the middle of the bombardment—and it was the busiest night we ever had."

WAR SCRAP BOOKS.

New York women are making scrap books, not only for the purpose of amusing the boys over in France, but to preserve for posterity reliable accounts of what is taking place today. These books contain not only stories but cartoons, the most wonderful that any age ever produced, being printed during these years of the war. Pictures and illustrations of all kinds will be valuable in these scrap books, but much of the printed matter will have to be eliminated if the war is to continue much longer, unless one is very careful in selection.

SUING "LITTLE MARY."

A dispatch from Los Angeles quotes Owen Moore, husband of Mary Pickford as saying:

"A suit for $250,000 for the alleged alienation of affection of his wife, Mary Pickford, will be filed this week by Owen Moore motion picture actor, against Douglas Fairbanks, according to a statement made by Moore. Moore declared that he was taking prompt action against Fairbanks for his own protection."

"I met Mr. Fairbanks in 1915," said Mr. Moore, "and we immediately became fast friends. I introduced him into my home and trusted him. I was the last to hear rumors and last to believe them. It is only recently that I came fully to realize actual conditions, and I have hesitated to take action, at first because I wished to be absolutely sure, then out of consideration for Mrs. Fairbanks, and recently because I did not wish to hamper in any way the Liberty Loan campaign, in which my wife is taking an active part."

"There has been but one aggressor in the case. My wife has been as much victimized as the rest, not wholly blameless, perhaps, but imposed upon."

On the same day "Little Mary" was in New York and this news of further litigation was sent out: "Mary Pickford had a busy time in the courts today."

There first was Attorney Samuel M. Field's suit against her for $5,000 counsel fees in negotiating certain contracts.

Then she hurried to a small jury room where an examination before trial began in the $120,000 suit of Cora C. Wilkenning for alleged services in obtaining for "Little Mary" the $1,000,000 salary she received last year.

Miss Pickford was handed a telegram regarding an alleged announcement of her husband, Owen Moore, that he would sue Douglas Fairbanks. Miss Pickford looked interested.

handed the telegram to her mother, and then to her lawyers, but refused to comment.

Later Dennis F. O'Brien, her lawyer, said they did not know a suit had been started."

BRUTAL REPLY

FROM GERMAN CROWN PRINCESS TO PETITION FOR SWISS GIRL'S FREEDOM.

Geneva, April 20.—When Miss Edith Cavell was executed in Belgium by the Germans a girl friend, Miss Julia Wyss, 20 years old, of Geneva, was sentenced to twenty-five years' penal servitude for the same offense. She is now in a Prussian prison.

A petition for a pardon, signed by 3,000 women of Geneva, was sent to the Crown Princess of Germany nearly a year ago. A cold, almost brutal reply, signed by Baron von Stulpzel, secretary to the Crown Princess, has just been received. It states briefly that the petition cannot be taken into consideration by the Crown Princess.

PURGED OF SLACKING.

Rev. William Croney, a colored preacher of Cadiz who was arrested some time ago upon the charge of failure to register under the draft law last June, was indicted on the charge by the Federal grand jury at Paducah Monday, but upon his promise to go into training just as soon as he can be called by the county board the charge was dismissed when the case was called for trial Tuesday morning.—Cadiz Record.

MARTINIQUE SHAKEN.

British troops operating on the Italian front made successful raids in the Asiago basin, where they inflicted heavy losses on the Austrians and took 22 prisoners.

EDUCATORS TO MEET.

The following paragraph which was taken from a Louisville paper recently will be of interest to teachers and others interested in public education:

Mrs. Cora Wilson Stewart, State director for the National Educational Association on last Wednesday appointed her executive committee, composed of President John Patterson, of the University of Louisville; President Frank L. McVey, of the University of Kentucky; President W. A. Ganfield, of Centre College; President H. H. Cherry, of the Western State Normal School; State Superintendent V. O. Gilbert; Superintendent J. A. Carnegie, of the Danville public schools, and F. C. Button, of Versailles, State agent of rural schools. The committee will meet in Louisville next Wednesday evening at 5 o'clock.

The association is making a campaign for 50,000 members, of which Kentucky's quota is 1,034. There are only about 100 members in the State, and this campaign is the principal subject before the committee."

COURT DEFINES POSSIBLE PERSECUTION OF GERMANS.

(By International News Service.)
Huntington, W. Va., April 20.—In his charge to the Grand Jury here Federal Judge Benjamin F. Keller warned against the persecution of Germans or those who have relatives in enemy countries. "Don't confuse the natural sympathy for the hardships and sufferings of near relatives in enemy countries with treasonable designs against the Government," he said.
